At this present time, many people around the country are trying to rebuild their lives and homes after the recent floods and cyclone. If you suddenly find yourself homeless, the first thing you want to salvage isn't so much a bed or a lounge suite or a TV but family photographs. My own family is no different! Fortunately, my dad Peter and his wife Lorraine were able to recover most of theirs. Photographs have a sentimental value that money can't replace, representing events that provide precious memories to sustain us when the present is tough, and the future is far from certain! It only takes one thought, one second, one moment or positive memory for the light of hope to gradually seep in again when all seems lost. As they say in France: La gratitude est la mémoire du cœur - gratitude is the memory of the heart.

In Matthew's Gospel narrative of his transfiguration, Jesus provides a similarly precious, sustaining memory for his adopted family. High up on a mountain peak, Jesus makes obvious what has been well hidden until now, revealing glory that no photograph could adequately capture. For Peter, James, and John, it is wonderful to be there. No wonder Peter wants to preserve the moment forever! But it's only by descending back down the mountain of that they will ever make sense of what they have just seen and heard. At the sound of God's voice, the two truths they find so hard to reconcile are joined. As "Messiah" and "Son of the living God", Jesus must suffer the apparent disaster of his suffering and death. In Matthew's narrative, it is precisely as God's beloved Son that Jesus will suffer and die. In what the Irish call a "thin place" (a surreal, physical space like a mountain, where heaven and earth seem to touch), Jesus completes what Abraham begins in response to God's call and promise in Genesis, revealing his glory to our friends as a foretaste of resurrection. There is something wonderfully human about this episode. By moving so swiftly from glory back to simple humanity, Matthew's narrative magnificently affirms the sense of divine presence and divine self-gift in the person of Jesus. Lest they have the experience but miss the meaning, our friends will have to leave behind the comfort of the familiar to face an unknown future. For the joy which lies in the future, the "Transfigured one" now shares his glory so that neither they nor we will be completely broken by the ordeal of the Cross to come. Suffering and joy are two sides of the same coin. Joy is not necessarily the absence of suffering. It is the presence of God. It's all a matter of perspective. The real meaning of Transfiguration consists not of seeking paradise on earth but of seeing life as it is with new eyes.

In this season of Lent we are called to display self-transcendence, to rise above the limits of narrow self-interest. In our second reading, Paul implores Timothy to bear with him the hardships that come for the sake of the Good News. Paul (or more likely someone else writing in Paul's name) is encouraging Timothy as he faces challenges in his ministry of church leadership. The more things change the more some things stay the same. Looking back to Abraham, Paul advises his young colleague to rely only on the power of God and not on his own efforts. God has saved Timothy and has called him to be holy, not because of anything he himself has done, but for God's own purpose and by God's own grace. In what ways is Lent challenging us to rely on the power of God? For those of us celebrating birthdays (like yours truly), can we look back on moments and places in our lives where we felt just as surprised by joy as Peter was? As we continue the process of our Parish's transformation from maintenance to mission, are our perspectives on life and faith broad enough and enlightened enough to see that nothing that is human is alien to us? That we cannot limit our vision of Church just to what we want to see and/or preserve without necessary change? As we climb upwards to meet the challenges of post-flood and cyclone recovery, we can still dance on the mountain top even as we remain grounded in present realities, without undue fear of the future. Just like a treasured family photograph, the Transfiguration is a moment in time that enables us to experience joy in unexpected ways, even as we walk with Jesus to the Cross through present sufferings. Gratitude is the memory of the heart that is enlightened by gazing on the face of the Transfigured Christ. It is good for us to be here.

What can I say? As I mark my 18th Anniversary of Priestly Ordination, I am amazed and humbled at everyone's loving affirmation and support for my ministry. The time has gone so quickly! There is already much to look back on and still so much more to look forward to. I still have a long, long way to go. Sure, I am grateful for them, and that I am grateful to God for the gift of my ministry and for my sharing in the Priesthood of Christ. As a good priest friend of mine said at his Ordination in Christchurch in December 2004: I promise to be faithful, but I cannot promise to be perfect! Please pray for me that I will continue to be a faithful priest in your service, for the rest of my life.

Cheers and Blessings to you all - Fr James
